Playing a musical instrument is a fantastic opportunity; however, below are things to consider – if lessons are to be worthwhile!

- Do not feel pressured into starting your child too early. If pupils take lessons before they are ready, they can easily become frustrated and lose interest. Children should take instrumental lessons if they are coping well with the curriculum, as missing academic lessons can be disruptive for some pupils.
- Daily practice is essential!! – Five times a week for ten minutes is an absolute minimum for a beginner! The more successful musicians tend to practice for about an hour a day six days a week.
